"MACHETE"

"It Happened in Mexico"

BY CHARLES MERRIAM

SCENE: A sugar plantation in Tehuantepec, Mexico, one hundred miles from the nearest hospital or drug store.

Two thousand native laborers from surrounding states. A young American whose official capacity was "chaperon to a couple of mules" applies a simple "home remedy" to the infected foot of a native laborer. He is at once dubbed the "Doctor" and is forced into service and does everything from dentistry to obstetrics.

Carlos E. Castenada, Latin American Librarian, University of Texas, says:

"It has the gripping interest of gaunt reality, portrayed with the pro[illegible]ng and sympathy for the conditions described. There is vividness, rich coloring, a deep understanding and sympathy for the people whose life he dissects with [illegible] and the fierceness of the physician."
