The Editor likewise gratefully acknowledges the extensive help in preparing the volume which he has received from Claire Gapper, Gordon Higgott, Maurice Howard and Margaret Newman.

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

MALCOLM AIRS is Reader in Conservation and the Historic Environment at the University of Oxford and a Fellow of Kellogg College. He is Chairman of the Institute of Historic Building Conservation, author of The Tudor and Jacobean Country House and editor of the continuing series of volumes on the English Great House.

CHRISTY ANDERSON, who has been a research fellow of Worcester College, Oxford and lecturer at the Open University, now teaches architectural history at Yale. Her study Inigo Jones: Books and Buildings in the English Renaissance is to be published later this year.

*JAMES ANDERSON, former Honorary Treasurer of the Society, is a practising architectural historian with a particular interest in the development of London in the early nineteenth century.

JOHN BOLD has written books on Wilton House and the architecture of John Webb. His book on Greenwich, prepared with colleagues from the former RCHM, was published at the end of last year. He is a consultant to the Council of Europe on the cultural heritage and teaches at the University of Westminster and at New York University in London.

*SIMON BRADLEY is Deputy Editor of the Pevsner Architectural Guides (Penguin Books). His essay, 'The Roots of Ecclesiology', was published in A Church as it Should Be, edited by John Elliott and Christopher Webster, in 2000.

*KERRY BRISTOL is a Lecturer in Architecture and Decorative Arts at the University of Leeds, the author of several forthcoming articles and a monograph on Athenian Stuart. Her special interests include the Grand Tour, European neo-classical architecture and Irish architecture 1660–1820.

BRIDGET CHERRY, now chief editor of the Pevsner Architectural Guides, became Pevsner's research assistant in 1968. She revised Surrey, Wiltshire and Northants, largely rewrote Devon in 1989 and has since masterminded the comprehensive series, now nearly complete, on London. She has been a commissioner for both English Heritage and the RCHME.

*THOMAS COCKE wrote a Courtauld thesis on the attitudes taken to medieval buildings and their care after the Middle Ages and particularly in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries; this has remained the focus of his research ever since. Most of his working life has been spent as an investigator with the former RCHME and now as Secretary of the Council for the Care of Churches.

HOWARD COLVIN F.B.A., Emeritus Fellow of St John's College, Oxford, world-renowned for the Biographical Dictionary of British Architects and The History of the King's Works, is also author of, inter alia, Architecture and the After-Life and (most recently) Essays in English Architectural History.

ROSALYS COOPE's monograph on Salomon de Brosse and her catalogue of the RIBA drawings of Jacques Gentilhâtre both appeared in 1972, since when her special interest in the architecture of the French Renaissance has been confirmed by regular appearance at the colloques at the University of Tours. She is the author of two seminal articles on the long gallery in Architectural History and has done much research on Newstead Abbey, published in several articles in the Transactions of the Thoroton Society of Nottinghamshire.

ROBERT CRAYFORD, Architectural Archivist at St Paul's, recently published a reconstruction (from the building accounts) of Inigo Jones's portico, and collaborated with Hentie Louw on a Constructional History of the Sash Window c.1670–1725 (Architectural History, 42 & 43).

PAUL CROSSLEY is a Senior Lecturer at the Courtauld Institute, the author of The Architecture of Kasimir the Great (1985). Recent publications include (as author–editor) the new edition of Paul Frankl's Gothic Architecture and (as co–editor) Architecture: Constructing Identity in European Architecture (both 2000). He has a specialist interest in the medieval architecture of Germany and eastern Europe and is writing a history of German late Gothic.

COLIN CUNNINGHAM, former Chairman of the Society, has recently retired from a Readership in Architectural History at the Open University. His study of Alfred Waterhouse, written jointly with Prudence Waterhouse, won the Alice Davis Hitchcock award in 1994. Stones of Witness appeared in 1999, a contribution to The Albert Memorial in 2000, and The Terracotta Designs of Alfred Waterhouse is due this year.

PETER DRAPER, the Society's current President, is Senior Lecturer in the History of Art at Birkbeck College, University of London. He has published extensively on English medieval architecture, focusing on the cultural interpretation of major churches and the interrelationship between architecture and liturgy.

ERIC FERNIE is Director of the Courtauld Institute and a student of medieval architecture. His most recent book, published this year, is The Architecture of Norman England.

TERRY FRIEDMAN, formerly Principal Keeper of the Henry Moore Centre for the Study of Sculpture in Leeds, and author of James Gibbs (1984), is currently at work on a broad study of eighteenth–century English church architecture.

*CLAIRE GAPPER took her M.A. at the Courtauld and followed it with a Ph.D. on English plasterwork of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, on which she has written and lectured. She is co–author, with John Newman and Annabel Ricketts, of 'Hatfield, a house for a Lord Treasurer' in Pauline Croft (ed.), Culture and Power: the early Cecils, due for publication later this year.

ANDOR GOMME used to teach English Literature and Architectural History at Keele University. He is a former Chairman of the Society and currently Honorary Editor of Architectural History. His book on Smith of Warwick was published earlier this year.

IAN GOODALL works in the Architectural Investigation section of English Heritage in York. He has contributed to a number of publications, including Furness Iron, English Hospitals 1600–1948 and Yorkshire Textile Mills 1770–1930.

*PAULA HENDERSON has a Ph.D. in architectural history from the Courtauld Institute. She specialized in the architecture of the setting of the English house in the Tudor and early Stuart periods, and her book on the subject will shortly be published.

*GORDON HIGGOTT is a Historic Buildings Inspector at English Heritage. He took his M.A. and Ph.D. at the Courtauld under Peter Kidson and John Newman. He is co-author (with John Harris) of Inigo Jones: Complete Architectural Drawings (1989) and has published on Jones's early continental travels and architectural theory. He is now researching the Wren office designs for Hampton Court Palace and St Paul's Cathedral

DEBORAH HOWARD, immediate past-Chairman of the Society, is Reader in Architectural History at the University of Cambridge and a Fellow of St John's College. Her latest book is Venice and the East: The Impact of the Islamic World on Venetian Architecture 1100–1500 (2000).

*MAURICE HOWARD's books include The Early Tudor Country House (1987) and The Tudor Image (1995). Forthcoming is The Vyne: The Archaeology of a great Tudor House, with Edward Wilson. He is Reader in Art History at the University of Sussex, a former Chairman of the Society and Senior Specialist Advisor to the V&A for the British Galleries Project, 2001.

PETER HOWELL has recently retired from teaching Latin at Royal Holloway College. His recent publications include chapters on 'Architecture 1800–1914' in vol. vii of The History of the University of Oxford and on Francis Skidmore in The Albert Memorial. He is currently working on a book on the triumphal arch from Roman times to the present.

*DAVID JACQUES is the author of Georgian Gardens: The Reign of Nature (1983) and The Gardens of William and Mary (1988), and was First Inspector of Historic Parks and Gardens at English Heritage from 1988 to 1993. He is currently Director of the Conservation (Landscapes & Gardens) course at the Architectural Association.

SALLY JEFFERY, a former Honorary Secretary of the Society, works as an architectural and garden historian with the Corporation of London and also teaches garden history at Birkbeck College. She is the author of the definitive architectural study of the London Mansion House.

JOHN JUŘICA is Assistant Editor of the Victoria History of Gloucestershire.

C. M. KAUFFMAN was formerly Keeper of Prints & Drawings and Paintings at the Victoria and Albert Museum (1975–85) and subsequently Professor of the History of Art and Director of the Courtauld Institute, University of London (1985–95).

*PAMELA D. KINGSBURY holds a Ph.D. in Art History from the University of Chicago. She is an independent scholar, writing on English eighteenth-century architecture and that of Frank Lloyd Wright, and she serves as architectural historian for the State of Kansas preservation board. Her book on Lord Burlington's Town Architecture was published in 1995.

KEITH KISSACK, a former member of Monmouth Borough Council and Director of Monmouth and Castle Museums, is the author of several books on the history and architecture of the town, and jointly of the Blue Guide to the churches of Herefordshire, Shropshire and Worcestershire.

*CHERRY ANN KNOTT was Curator of Sudbury Hall for five years until 1983. Subsequently, as a post-graduate student at the Courtauld Institute, she did research on Sudbury in the Vernon family archives.

*ALISON MAGUIRE wrote her Courtauld Ph.D. thesis on Country-House Planning in England, 1660–1700. She now works as an independent Consultant Architectural Historian and is also engaged (in collaboration with Andor Gomme) in researching and writing a book on the compact house plan.

RODERICK O'DONNELL is an expert on the Pugins and the Roman Catholic revival in these islands. He was research assistant in Dublin for the Buildings of Ireland 1975–78 and frequently contributes to the revised Buildings of . . . volumes, but found his house damned with faint praise in the revised Norfolk as 'suburban Arts & Crafts'. He has been an inspector with English Heritage and its predecessor bodies since 1982.

JOHN PEACOCK teaches English at Southampton University. His book on The Stage Designs of Inigo Jones came out in 1995. He has now turned to the study of Van Dyck, for which he has recently received a Leverhulme research fellowship.

SARAH PEARSON formerly worked for the RCHME and for them wrote The Medieval Houses of Kent: an Historical Analysis (1994). She is the immediate Part-President of the Vernacular Architecture Group. Her extended introduction to the Kent Hearth Tax Assessment: Lady Day 1664 is to be published by the British Record Society this year.

*RACHEL PERRY specializes in French architecture and is currently working on a book on François-Joseph Belanger, the subject of her Courtauld Ph.D.

STEPHEN PORTER is Assistant Editor with the Survey of London section of English Heritage, working on a study of the London Charterhouse for a forthcoming volume in the series. He is author of Exploring Urban History (1990), Destruction in the English Civil Wars (1994), The Great Fire of London (1996) and The Great Plague (1999), and editor of London and the Civil War (1996).

ANTHONY QUINEY, Professor of Architectural History at the University of Greenwich, prolific author and a former Chairman of the Society and President of the Royal Archaeological Institute, is currently completing a book on the medieval urban houses of Britain.

*AILEEN REID was educated at Edinburgh University and the Courtauld Institute, where she wrote a doctoral dissertation on the architectural career of E. W. Godwin (1833–86). She was joint editor with Robert Mainura of Edward Alleyn: Elizabethan Actor, Jacobean Gentleman (1994). Her latest book is Brentham: a History of the Pioneer Garden Suburb 1901–2001 (2000); she currently works as assistant literary editor of The Sunday Telegraph.

MARGARET RICHARDSON has worked at Sir John Soane's Museum since 1985 and been its curator since 1995. She co-edited the exhibition John Soane: Master of Space and Light at the Royal Academy of Arts in 1999.

DAVID ROBINSON is an architectural historian with the Historical Analysis and Research Team at English Heritage. Essentially a medievalist, he was previously academic editor of the Cadw: Welsh Historic Monuments guidebook series.

*FRANK SALMON has been lecturing in art history at the University of Manchester since 1989. His book Building on Ruins: The Rediscovery of Rome and English Architecture was published late last year.

*CHRISTINE STEVENSON is a lecturer in the History of Art at the University of Reading. She has published articles on Hogarth and on eighteenth-century institutional architecture in England, Scotland and Denmark, and in 2000 the book Medicine and Magnificence: British Hospital and Asylum Architecture 1660–1800.

TIM TATTON-BROWN was Director of the Canterbury Archaeological Trust from 1975 to 1985 and is now a freelance archaeologist and architectural historian. He helped with the third edition of The Buildings of England: North-east and East Kent and has recently published Lambeth Palace, a history of the Archbishops of Canterbury and their houses (2000).

CHRISTOPHER WAKELING, the Society's current Chairman, teaches architectural and art history at Keele University. He has a special interest in the architecture of non-conformism, and is the author of the section on Post-Renaissance architecture in the centenary edition of Sir Banister Fletcher's History of Architecture.

*ADAM WHITE studied English Renaissance sculpture under John Newman at the Courtauld in the 1970s and has remained a devotee of the subject ever since. His Biographical Dictionary of London Tomb Sculptors c.1560–c.1660 was published by the Walpole Society in 1999. For the past six years he has worked as Curator of Lotherton Hall, Leeds Museums and Galleries.

*RICHARD WILLIAMS, who has been a part-time tutor at Birkbeck College, is currently completing a doctoral thesis at the Courtauld Institute on the impact of the Reformation on visual culture in Elizabethan England. His chapter on 'Libels and Payntinges: Elizabethan Catholics and the International Campaign of Visual Propaganda' is due to be published shortly in John Foxe and his World.

ELIZABETH WILLIAMSON, joint author of the revised Pevsner Guides on Buckinghamshire, Leicestershire and Rutland, and Nottinghamshire, is now Architectural Editor of The Victoria History of the Counties of England.

*ROGER WOODLEY wrote his doctoral thesis on the professional development of Robert Mylne. He teaches architectural history at University College, London and is preparing the next edition of the London Blue Guide.

*GILES WORSLEY, architectural correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, is the author of Classical Architecture in Britain (1995) and editor of The Life and Works of John Carr, by Brian Wragg (2000).

* Former students of John Newman at the Courtauld Institute.
