Great Britain

F. W. Maitland

G. R. Elton

In the eyes of scholars of history and jurisprudence, F. W. Maitland is among the very greatest of English historians, yet little has been written about him. G. R. Elton, one of the leading historians of his own generation, now remedies this omission with a skilled, succinct, and vigorous essay that is both biography and critique. $15.00

PAST AND PRESENT

a journal of historical studies

“la plus grande revue d’histoire du monde anglophone”: Annales

“No historical periodical has done more than Past and Present to influence the study and teaching of history in British universities . . . It has proved extremely fertile in new interpretations, ideas and controversies . . . What makes Past and Present so invigorating is that it encourages historians to extend their horizons and ask new questions”: Times Higher Educational Supplement

Past and Present began publication in 1952. It now appears in February, May, August and November. It publishes a wide variety of scholarly and original historical articles primarily concerned with social, economic and cultural changes, and their causes and consequences, ranging in time from prehistory to the present day and world-wide in coverage. The Journal is designed to reach an audience that includes both specialists and non-specialists; to communicate the results of historical research in readable and lively form; to provide a forum for debate in which historians and scholars in allied subjects take part; to reach beyond the bounds of conventional history into nearby disciplines such as anthropology, sociology, literature and study of the visual arts and architecture; and to encourage the examination of particular problems and periods for the light they throw on wider issues of historical change.

Recent contributors to the Journal have included John Bossy, Robert Brenner, Peter Burke, David Cannadine, Samuel Clark, Stuart Clark, Linda Colley, Natalie Zemon Davis, Mark Elvin, John Hatcher, Douglas Hay, Christopher Hill, R. H. Hilton, E. J. Hobsbawm, Olwen Hufton, Martin Ingram, Mervyn James, Henry Kamen, Fergus Millar, Theodore K. Rabb, W. D. Rubinstein, W. G. Runciman, Eugene Schulkind, Joan Wallach Scott, T. C. Smout, Lawrence Stone, Enrique Tandeter, E. A. Wrigley, Eileen Yeo.

The Industrial Reformation of English Fiction

Social Discourse and Narrative Form, 1832–1867

Catherine Gallagher

"This is the best piece of inter-disciplinary Victorian literary criticism I have seen. The scope of Gallagher's scholarship is immense. [The book] is really a marvelous achievement."

The Heavenly Contract Ideology and Organization in Pre-Revolutionary Puritanism

David Zaret

Zaret fully explicates the tremendous influence that popular beliefs and activities had on Puritan religion. His conclusions revise Weber's classic analysis: it was not a spirit of acquisitiveness derived from Puritan religion that gave rise to modern capitalism; rather, the spirit of capitalism antedated and shaped the Protestant ethic.

A HISTORY OF ENGLAND AND THE EMPIRE-COMMONWEALTH

by Walter P. Hall; Robert G. Albion & Jennie B. Pope
5th Ed. 1974, Reprint 1984 816 pp. $54.50

This textbook covers the history of England from about 500 B.C. with the coming of the Celts, to the new policies of the Tories, following their victory in mid-1970, and the late stages of the "end of empire".

The latest scholarly findings have been embodied throughout, with important new conclusions in certain places. The many pictures and maps and the fact that it is written in a clear, sound and interesting manner make this an excellent history textbook.

Islands of History

Marshall Sahlins

The islands of history that Sahlins discusses are South Seas islands whose histories have touched our own — Hawaii, Fiji, New Zealand. But he is also concerned with the insular thinking in Western scholarship that creates false dichotomies between past and present, between structure and event, between the individual and society. Sahlins's provocative reflections form a powerful critique of Western history and anthropology.

Atlas of the English Civil War

P. R. NEWMAN

With fresh interest in the English Civil War, this book provides a needed clarification of the battles and military strategy that ultimately determined its outcome. A concise text follows each stage of the war, covering major and minor campaigns in Scotland, Ireland, and Wales as well as in England. The chapters, organized chronologically, each contain a full-page map, either of a particular conflict or larger-scale developments from the Battle of Edgehill to the restoration of Charles II. Bibliography and index.

The Police of Britain

PHILIP JOHN STEAD

From Saxon "hundredmen" and "reeves" to today's "bobbies," this is a detailed history of Britain's unique experience with professional law enforcement. Stead explores the emergence of the police in the violent 18th and 19th centuries, its relationship to common law, how its organization compares to that of police forces in Europe and the United States, and its contributions to the criminal justice system.

Dudley Docker

The Life and Times of a Trade Warrior

R.P.T. Davenport-Hines

Dudley Docker (1862-1944) was one of the most powerful European businessmen of his era, a "mystery man" whose secretiveness and taste for intrigue has hitherto hidden his importance. In recreating Docker's life and times, Dr. Davenport-Hines provides a mixture of business, economic, political, social, and even diplomatic history around the theme of British industrial decline since the 1880s.

The First Industrialists

The Problem of Origins

François Crouzet

Professor Crouzet makes an inquiry into the social and occupational origins of the "first industrialists" of the eighteenth century, men who founded factories and other large establishments that were typical of a new economic system. He makes a significant contribution to the question of social mobility during the Industrial Revolution.

Trade, Plunder and Settlement

Maritime Enterprise and the Genesis of the British Empire, 1480-1630

Kenneth R. Andrews

This account of the maritime expansion of England presents a radical reinterpretation of the forces, motives, and circumstances that gave rise to the British Empire. Without being anti-imperialist, the author gives a much more critical, detached, and analytical account of this long and painful struggle than former imperial histories have done.

The Tithe Surveys of England and Wales

Roger J.P. Kain and Hugh C. Prince

The large-scale plans, schedules, and maps drawn up for the Tithe Commissioners in mid-nineteenth-century rural England and Wales provide the most complete record of the agrarian landscape at any period. This book describes the nature of tithe payments, the Tithe Commutation Act of 1836, and the survey of over 11,000 parishes.

Sir John Davies and the Conquest of Ireland

A Study in Legal Imperialism

Hans H. Pawlisch

This study examines the law reports of Sir John Davies and the litigation pleaded before the central Irish courts during the period in which Davies served in Ireland as Solicitor-General (1603-6) and Attorney General (1606-19). Controversial themes include the origins of the precedent in the Anglo-American legal tradition, the use of continental civil law in common law litigation, and the relationship of early modern Ireland to the development of an imperial jurisprudence.
