NOTICES

• The National Commission on New Technological Uses of Copyrighted Works (CONTU) commissioned Professor William J. Baumol and other members of the New York University Department of Economics to do an extensive economic analysis of the Economics of Property Rights as Applied to Computer Software and Data Bases. This report was presented to CONTU at the fifteenth meeting of the commission in July 1977 and is now available for purchase through the National Technical Information Service (NTIS).

The study indicates that the economists find copyright protection preferable to trade secrecy but think a two- to fourteen-year term of protection would be optimal.

To order the report, specify NTIS code number PB 268 787 and send American Express credit card number or check or money order ($6 paper copy or $3 microfiche) to NTIS, Department of Commerce, Springfield, VA 22161. Reports are mailed out fourth class mail. For first class mail service, NTIS requests an additional $2.

• The Texas A&M University Libraries has published as its Miscellaneous Publication 15 The Land-Grant Movement and the Development of Academic Libraries: Some Tentative Explorations, an address by Edward G. Holley at the annual meeting of the Beta Eta (Texas) chapter of Beta Phi Mu on October 30, 1976, in College Station, Texas.

This twenty-five page publication was prepared for distribution to the members of the Beta Eta (Texas) Chapter of Beta Phi Mu; however, a limited number of copies are available for $4 each, prepaid, from the Friends of the Texas A&M University Library, Sterling C. Evans Library, Texas A&M University, College Station, TX 77843.

• The Far Eastern Library of the University of Chicago has recently published Far Eastern Serials (Reference List No. 2.).

A holding list of approximately 5,000 serial titles on East Asia in Far Eastern and Western languages in the Far Eastern Library and other departmental libraries of the University of Chicago Library system is arranged by language into four sections: Chinese, Japanese, Korean, and Western languages, each with a main text and an addenda, except for the section of Korean serials. Within each section, titles are arranged alphabetically according to the Wade-Giles romanization.

The above publications can be ordered for $8 postpaid from the Photoduplication Department, University of Chicago Library, 1100 E. 57th Street, Chicago, IL 60637. The library's Reference List No. 1 on Chinese Local Histories is out of print.

• The Information Industry Association announces publication of Essential Elements of a Copyright Clearinghouse, which considers the origins, procedures, and functions of the new Copyright Clearance Center, Inc. (CCC). The CCC will be operational by January 1, 1978, when the new copyright law takes effect.

Featured are the proceedings of a 1976 conference cosponsored by Information Industry Association (IIA) and the Association of American Publishers (AAP). The newly organized CCC, designed to provide publishers (and, where appropriate, authors) with a relatively simple, centralized mechanism to pay self-designated fees for authorized photocopying, is a reality that grew out of the conference.

In addition to presentations and discussions by active participants at the conference, the book contains several supplements, including the new CCC Guidelines for Serial Publishers and an index to the conference proceedings and discussion.

The Copyright Clearance Center, a historic development in the effort to collect and distribute copy payments for photocopying of copyrighted works in excess of fair use, incorporates many of the concepts developed at the IIA/AAP Conference. These include: numbering system; transaction accounting; the "Cachet" plan; electronic funds transfer; article reprint services; and many more.

Copies are available from Information Industry Association for $15 each (140p.). Prepaid orders should be sent to: Information Industry Association, Suite 904, 4720 Montgomery Lane, Bethesda, MD 20014.

- The library at the University of California-Davis has announced that the 1976 edition of its self-paced Introduction to Library Research and Bibliography has been revised and updated. The 132-page book (consisting of text, laboratory exercises, and pre/post-evaluation instruments) is from the core of a semi-independent, three-unit course currently being taught to undergraduate and graduate students at Davis. Topics covered in Introduction to Library Research and Bibliography include: catalog use; reference skills; serials; indexes and abstracts; government documents; bibliographies; research strategies; microcopy; and automatic bibliographic searching. Each week, students taking the course meet with the instructors for one hour and spend six hours working on the laboratory exercises included in the book. While most of the content and exercises emphasize general library skills, subject-related sources are also indicated. Introduction to Library Research and Bibliography is available for $6.25 (make checks payable to the Regents, University of California). Send purchase requests to Carol S. Rominger; Reference Department; Shields Library; University of California, Davis; Davis, CA 95616.

- Several new SPEC flyers and kits are now available. Preservation of Library Materials (no. 35) reports on a survey of members of the Association of Research Libraries (ARL) undertaken in April 1977 as part of a collection analysis project of the Office of University Library Management Studies.

The survey found that while few of the respondents have a codified preservation program, there is growing recognition of the need to plan for such a program. It was found that the major preservation investment by ARL libraries is in the area of binding, as evidenced by an average of $97,000 spent per year per ARL library. Regarding a National Preservation Program, expectations varied a great deal from library to library, with many looking to it for standards, guidance on local preservation efforts, and as a center for rare or little used materials. Education of patrons and administrators as to the seriousness of preservation problems was cited as a first step toward developing a program that will assure the continued availability and use of research materials.

Determining Indirect Cost Rates in Research Libraries (no. 34) reports on current university practices for recovering research-related indirect costs.

In a time of increasing financial pressure, universities and libraries are searching for accounting procedures that will allow them to recover their fair share of indirect costs incurred during federally sponsored research. However, changing regulations, various interpretations of the rules, and a lack of established, proven procedures for library use studies contribute to a complicated process that often raises more questions than answers. The flyer notes that at a time when development of more rigorous library use studies might lead to more equitable cost recovery, it is important that budget offi-

Written Standards for Evaluation of Librarians

The library at San Jose State University has established written standards for evaluation of librarians. The standards are specific and address the kinds of competencies that are expected for particular positions, such as reference, cataloging, acquisitions, or administration. The library is interested in the response of other libraries and librarians to the document and in seeing similar standards established by other libraries. Those wishing to receive a copy of the Standards for Professional Performance, or wishing to send a copy of their own guidelines, should contact: Associate Director, San Jose State University, 250 South 4th Street, San Jose, CA 95192.

cers and library administrators work together to explore fully the improvement of such studies. To that end, the accompanying kit contains library cost studies and user surveys, accounting worksheets, and other documents that reflect the current status of indirect cost recovery.

Requests for each flyer and kit should be sent to: Office of University Library Management Studies, Association of Research Libraries, 1527 New Hampshire Ave., N.W., Washington, DC 20036. Kits are $7.50 each to SPEC members and subscribers, and $15.00 each to others. Information about SPEC subscriptions and standing orders is available from the above address, or by calling (202) 232-8656.
