Keywords: pedagogy, education, upbringing, morality, humanity, honesty, self-education, spiritual heritage.

Ahmad Yasawi attached great importance to the issues of moral education in his works. As a great thinker of his time and one of the founders of mystical literature, he believed that the basis of human spiritual growth and the development of society is moral education.

In Yasawi's works, the image of moral education, the implementation of which is carried out through self-awareness, spiritual purification and rapprochement with God, is expressed in the method itself. He especially reminds young people of the importance of education and upbringing, noting the need to teach them such qualities as patience, honesty, diligence, humility and decency.

Yasawi's mystical philosophy and wisdom encourage people to improve their personal morality, as well as to maintain respect and unity in society for a sustainable service. In this regard, the importance of education in education and upbringing continues to develop and continues to be active in today's modern pedagogical process.

Moral education should not be limited to theoretical knowledge, but should be formed through its application in practice. The wisdom of Ahmad Yasawi is an example of this, in which people can be clearly shown how to follow the right path in practical life. Therefore, in his work, a deep study of the importance of moral education in education is still relevant today.

Ahmad Yasawi (1093–1166), an important representative of Central Asian mystical poetry and one of the sheikhul mashayikhs, paid special attention to the issues of moral education in his works. His teachings and poetry are aimed at improving the spiritual life of the people, developing human qualities

Ahmad Yassavi paid great attention to moral education and human development in his works. According to him, moral education helps to observe a person as a perfect person, but also plays an important role in ensuring peace and unity in society.

In his wisdom, Yassavi praised such qualities as honesty, humility, decency, patience, and kindness, and called on people to apply these qualities in their lives. He emphasized the need to strengthen moral education with knowledge as the basis of personal development.

At the same time, Yassavi drew attention to the inextricable link between education and upbringing, saying that upbringing is not only theoretical, but also practical. He taught that every person should educate his soul, keep his heart pure, and be kind to other people.

In conclusion, Ahmad Yassavi highly appreciated the importance of moral education in education and considered it as the main actions of human and social life. His teaching sources are still invaluable in leading the younger generation to spiritual and moral perfection today.
