

There is a sameness in my days
A slow piling (like snow)
Compiling my life.
A continuum,
Stretching out across the hours,
Sounding in the breaths that breathe away the years.

And I remember being a child,
Blowing dandelion spores into the wind.

Phyllis Moore

Louis Sabo