

Case Studies in Community-Engaged Business Education

Introduction

Danica Schieber^a

^a Department of Business Administration and Entrepreneurship. Sam Houston State University. Huntsville, TX.

Dear readers,

Welcome to our special section on community engaged work in business. Here at Sam Houston State University, we are dedicated to bringing community engaged learning into our classrooms. The Center for Community Engagement (CCE) serves as the central hub at SHSU for fostering connections and collaborations between the campus and the community. By focusing on Community Partnership Development, Faculty Development, and Student Development, the CCE creates, organizes, oversees, and advocates for initiatives that strengthen the culture of community involvement and civic engagement. The CCE is dedicated to maintaining SHSU's status as a community engaged campus recognized nationally since 2010 by the Carnegie Foundation. The collaboration between institutions of higher education and their larger communities serve to enrich scholarship, prepare educated and engaged citizens, strengthen civic responsibility, address societal issues, and contribute to the public good.

The following case studies highlight some of the community engaged work that is happening within our business classrooms.

We hope you enjoy them and find some inspiration in them.

Thank you,
Danica Schieber
Section Editor, Case Studies in Community-Engaged Business Education