Objectives

The objective of this research was to gather local information on the distribution of birds in Grand Teton National Park and vicinity, and to use the library facilities of the Research Center for reference materials not otherwise available to me.

Methods

Ten days in early July were spent at the Research Center, doing fieldwork and using the library.

Results

During my stay, I was able to work out several problems of occurrence or breeding of bird species for which information was contradictory or lacking. I was also able to write a general overview and introduction to the book manuscript, which is now much farther along, and which might be finished in 1984. It will be published by the Colorado Associated University Press.
