

Notes from the Editor-in-Chief

The Economic Analysis publishes original articles in all fields of economic theory and practice. In other words, it connects economics to real-world experiences. The potential spectrum of topics is broad including economic development, green economics, employment and education policy, labor issues, business governance and ethics, management of human resources, marketing, microeconomics, monetary and financial economics and other topics.

We invite academicians, professors, researchers, PhD and master students which are connected to the topics of the journal, to publish their work.

I hope that 2013 will bring you professional advancement and a lot of quality research to share with our readers.

Yours!
