FOREWORD

There are of course innumerable prayer-books already published. The best are those like the Missal and the Breviary which unite us most closely to the words of Christ, the Holy Spirit and the Church.

But there are people, the sick, who cannot go to Mass. There are others, many workers, who can go only rarely. And all desire occasionally short prayers to use at other times than at Mass and Divine Service.

To fill this use, to place in a handy and easily available form the many, short, indulgenced prayers, is the object of this article. An examination of it, better than any words, will reveal, I believe, its qualities.

However, its uniqueness can well be mentioned in these four points:

I. It is a collection of indulgenced prayers from official, not merely approved, sources. After the Missal and the Breviary what better prayers than these, authorized, blessed, even indulged by the universal Church? The present collection has moreover been directly translated from the recently published "Preces et Pia Opera." This work, published this last Spring by the Holy See, forms a definitive general collection, the first in forty years, of indulged prayers and good works. Furthermore all decrees of the Holy See on the subject of Indulgences, issued up to the sixteenth of July of this year, have been carefully considered. This all gives a special guarantee of correctness. The whole work likewise bears the Imprimatur of Archbishop Cantwell of Los Angeles.

II. It is a complete and exclusive collection of short indulged prayers. It contains 202 of these ejaculations. On the other hand, it is not cluttered up with long prayers.

III. It is so arranged as to foster intelligent and constant devotion. Each set of prayers, whether to the Blessed Trinity, Jesus, our Savior or our Lady, has been put in logical order. There are first, prayers of adoration and thanksgiving, then prayers of petition. Besides, the collection is divided, like the Psalms in the Breviary, for use on the seven days of the week.

On the other hand, to be as serviceable as possible for repeated acts of piety, distracting references about different classes of indulgences have been shortened, and unnecessary citation of authorities eliminated. Only prayers suitable to any time or place have been included. So, the indulgences attached to any ejaculation in this booklet can be gained as often as it is devoutly repeated and may be applied at will to the living or the dead.

This booklet, therefore, may be used at home, in the office, on the train, in the hospital, as well as in church. Its beautiful prayers may serve for morning prayers, prayer at Mass, after Holy Communion, for visits to the Blessed Sacrament, evening prayer, in fact almost every occasion.

IV. Eight pictures of the life of our Lord, showing His power and mercy, the chief sources of the blessing of both prayer and indulgences, have been included.

Thanks are extended to Fathers William Shepherd, S. J., of Hollywood and John Collins, O. M. I., late of San Fernando, for encouragement and helpful criticism. Also to Rev. Dr. S. Lucas, O. M. I., of San Antonio, Texas for assistance in translating the Italian prayers and Miss Leonore Jacques for help in preparing the booklet for the press.

If you, who use it, will occasionally remember my intentions in your prayers, my fondest hopes will be realized.
